Now, that we, the public, have access to information, are we able to make better plans for the future of our cities and regions? Are we more inclusive in our planning efforts? Are we able to foster collaborative governance structures that incorporate different perspectives and technologies? In the book, these issues are discussed using a three-part framework. The first part of the book is theoretical – it will review the literature in the field, establish a framework to organize the literature and link to three different subject areas (participation and community development, GIS and other related technologies, and planning processes). The second part of the book will be a series of success stories that demonstrate how GIS and other related technologies can be used to foster more inclusive planning. The third part of the book will be a series of GIS case studies that are actively being used in various planning issues (planning broadly defined). The final part of the book will step back to review alternative scenarios for the future, exploring where we are headed, as the technologies we are using to plan rapidly change.

G raft: Remember liberation by a young man in a Jewish town at the foothills of the Carpathian Mountains in 1945 to a devout Jewish family, and his journey through the Holocaust toward academia in the United States. This new edition also follows his story into retirement. This book is the revelation and personal evolution of a boy born and steeped in orthodoxy who, while retaining the essence of the values into which he was raised, sought at the same time to reverse his original impulses. It takes him where the Holocaust beckons and we are introduced to the universe of mankind. This book is also a description of his effort to reeducate his children to make him work to make the world “free.” In the camps, he lost most of his family upon which the foundation of his early life was built. After the war, finding himself alone, he had no family to return to and no place to go. He turned to the study of law, strives to overcome obstacles and eventually wins a niche for himself in a new, post-World War II Europe. Eugene Schoenfeld, shares his readers the hardships he endured both in the camps and after liberation; of hunger and loneliness; and his father led by the war against the Iron Curtain. He issues his readers a message of hope; that the struggle has not yet ended for his children. He offers an answer to the question he asked his father on the first day in Auschwitz-Birkenau: “How is possible that now, in the midst of the twenty, after all the great achievements in philosophy, psychology, and theoretical science, man is still inhumane?”

A Memoir of War: This book describes the collection of four-volume enterprise with the collection of empirical data on Holocaust education around the world. It comes at a critical time, as the world observes the 70th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz. We are now at a turning point, as the generations that witnessed and survived the Shoah are slowly passing on. Governments are charged with ensuring that this defining event of the 20th century take its rightful place in the school and the historical consciousness of their peoples. The policies and practices of Holocaust education around the world are as diverse as the countries that grapple with it and its history and memory. This book presents a unique opportunity to present the Shoah. This book illustrates a moment of scholarship about the Holocaust in Europe has matured. In this book, these issues are framed by some of the leading voices in the field, including Elie Wiesel and Yehuda Bauer, and then explored by many distinguished scholars. They present a wide range of perspectives on how to educate students about the Holocaust, to ensure that is not repeated.
